

Beacon Family Services

Statement of Purpose

Our Mission Statement

Beacon Family Services helps children and their parents, carers and teachers develop and build strong connections and healthy relationships using play-based therapies and training so that they can feel safe and secure.

Our Principles and Values

Established in 2018, Beacon Family Services is a not-for-profit, therapeutic family support agency based in the West Midlands. We work directly with children and/or their parents, carers, teachers, social workers or other professionals, including those who have no access to funding.

We provide evidence-based, attachment-led services, such as therapeutic support or psychoeducation and training, to enhance attachment relationships resulting from a child's social and/or mental health needs or experiences of trauma.

The welfare of children is our fundamental priority. We believe every child has a right to grow up in a stable, nurturing family environment and that children's self-esteem, sense of belonging, ability to trust and care for self and others is enhanced by supporting their positive social engagement with their family and community.

We support these beliefs through:

- ◆ listening to each family's unique experiences so that children get the bespoke service they need
- ◆ building relationships with families, offering understanding and support so that families can overcome developmental challenges and improve their quality of life
- ◆ supporting adoptive, fostered and kinship families to improve the relationships of children and their primary carers so that children can overcome trauma and the loss of their early experiences

- ◆ offering expert therapy in a professional way so that children and their parents and carers feel safe
- ◆ helping families access therapeutic support so that all children can benefit from support with emotional wellbeing
- ◆ building partnerships with community organisations so that they can develop relationship-based approaches to supporting families
- ◆ helping parents develop confidence in safe and expertly supported therapeutic environments so that parents can develop their relationships with their children
- ◆ providing a link between families and schools so that parents can feel listened to and be confident that their children will feel safe at school and be ready to learn

Who we work with

We work with families, providing assessments to help determine what a child needs. This informs the provision of therapeutic work and psychoeducation to help meet the identified needs.

We work with the community providing an innovative group model of child and family therapy, assisting community organisations to further develop relationship-based approaches to supporting families.

We work with schools to identify children's bespoke needs. We offer consultation to support children's emotional and social needs and assist them be ready to learn and achieve their full potential.

We work with other professionals to provide training around the models and approaches we use, supervision and peer support.
